

Homeopathy is a Holistic, Scientific, and Time-tested System of Medicine. It was invented by the German physician Dr. Samuel Hahnemann in the 17th century. He was born on the 10th of April, 1755 in Meissen, Germany.

His father was a painter. He came from a poor economic background and struggled a lot in his younger days, but he was quite motivated and finished his MD at Erlangen University. He became an Allopathic physician, yet was soon disillusioned by Modern Medicine's limitations and the common practices at the time, like bloodletting. After finishing his post-graduation, his thirst for knowledge could not be quenched. He studied a vast number of subjects and served in various positions. He was often the brunt of criticism from his peers and often had very little to eat or to support his family with but he was never swayed from his main goal.